I am writing this statement of purpose, with regard to Nursing degree program that I want to pursue in your university. I want to have an interesting, challenging career that positively impacts the lives of communities daily. I relish the diversity in nursing practice as one interacts with many aspects of patient care. Going to a nursing school is very beneficial. First, it is satisfying because I will achieve my dream of making a difference caring for people in need. Second, it is rewarding as I will learn diverse skills. Also, it is a profession in high demand and have a room for career growth and development.

The course perfectly fits my skill set. First, I can maintain a positive attitude and uplift people around me who may be feeling down. I am also aware of my emotions when dealing with other people and interact with them in an empathetic way. Besides, I am culturally competent and relate well with people of diverse backgrounds. I am computer literate and can use a broad range of technology to be effective in the healthcare environment. I know how to check and monitor patients' vital signs like temperature, heart rate, blood pressure, and respiration.

I stand out from the crowd since I am passionate about studying and becoming a practicing nurse with an intense desire and enthusiasm to care for patients. My previous job at a charity organization helped me become accomplished at caring for and helping people of all ages, particularly the elderly and the people with disabilities, from diverse backgrounds. I have also learned about family education, which is critical in nursing practice.

In my future career, I aspire to become a practicing nurse, join a professional organization, and help people who need care, pursue professionalism, and become a nursing educator. I will invest in education and specialize in a nursing program that has more options for new opportunities.

My work as a nursing educator can benefit the university. I will be responsible for developing, implementing, assessing, and revising academic and continuing nurses' educational programs, including formal academic programs that lead to a certificate or degree.
